Emirates Airline: A Billion-Dollar Sukuk Bond

Introduction

The case of Emirates Airline is a leading airline that experienced a peculiar form of financial issue that demanded creative as well as analytical solutions. The successful sale of a billion-dollar Sukuk bond with the company's economical expertise in addition to meeting the Shariah requirements of the Islamic world laid a template for the aviation finance industry globally.

Organization Background

Emirates Airline was established in year 1985 and within a short span of time it became one of the prominent airline of global landscape, which is well known for quality service deliveries and connectivity.

However, the airline industry is heavily capitalized and had big expansion plans; huge amounts of cash were required.

The Billion-Dollar

Sukuk bonds or Islamic bonds do not attract or pay any form of interests in the capital market violating the Shariah laws. Contrary to conventional bonds, Sukuk investors invest in an asset and receive the returns from the stock in question. For Emirates, issuing a billion-dollar Sukuk bond was an excellent strategic process to positively appeal to the increasing demand for ethical and Shariah compliant products as well as to diversify its sources of funding.
