MACROECONOMICS

Introduction

In the discipline of economics, macroeconomics is the study of large economic forces such as inflation, national income and employment and therefore affords a view of economies from a wider lens. It is therefore essential for business people and policy makers to study macro economics because it provides guidance in the appropriate decision making in this heavily integrated economy.

Gross Domestic

Gross Domestic Product (GDP) – GDP is indication the gross value of all services and products that are produced in the course of one fiscal year in a given country. Measuring the GDP growth or decline performance gives a quick check on how our economy is fairing.

Flation and Deflation

Inflation is the general increase in prices and deflation is on the general decrease in prices for commodities and services offered. All impact on purchasing power, interest rate and wage policies.

The background of the slide is a historical painting of a harbor scene. In the foreground, several large sailing ships with multiple masts and sails are visible, along with smaller boats. The middle ground shows a wide body of water with a few more ships. In the background, a city with domed buildings and a minaret is situated on a hillside overlooking the water. The sky is filled with soft, golden clouds, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The overall style is that of a classical oil painting.
