This case is available on www.casesolutions.com where students, academicians and corporate leaders share their analysis and structural solutions.

The background of the slide is a detailed historical painting of a coastal city, likely Constantinople, viewed from an elevated perspective. The city is built on a peninsula and a hillside, with numerous domed buildings and a prominent minaret. The harbor is filled with various ships, including large multi-masted sailing vessels and smaller boats. The sky is filled with soft, golden clouds, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The overall style is that of a 19th-century historical painting.

Main Problems

The latest Financial and Policy Update demonstrated that Connecticut municipalities suffer the highest levels of fiscal stress because their revenues are shrinking while their operating costs are rising. The overdependence of towns on property taxes as the major source of revenues has compounded inequity in the distributions of resources between wealthy and struggling towns.

Reform Strategies

If Connecticut municipalities are to meet these challenges, governance reforms are necessary. This case shows that successful implementation of and interoperability between public works projects would require cooperation between local government departments, state organizations, and private partners.
