ETHICS AND CSR CASE SOLUTION

INTRODUCTION

In the current business environment ethics and CSR provide fundamental components that facilitate the sustainable undertaking of business. Ethics is the set of principles that define the correct action of a concerning company, whereas CSR is all about the activities that company performs in the interest of society and environment beyond the monetary benefit.

LEADERSHIP'S CONTRIBUTION

The evidence supports the central proposition that leadership attitudes significantly influence the ethical climate and CSR decisions more broadly of a firm. The leaders they ought to be models of truth and accountability as well as commitment to organisational integrity.

ETHICAL PRACTICES

The first area that organizations find difficult to determine is to identify ethical concerns within operations. Such may pertain to areas such as waste disposal and material use, and labor treatment and pay. It is common in many organisations to see tensions between short-term gains and long-term responsibilities that are essentially ethical in nature.

CONCLUSION

Ethics and CSR Case as presented provides the framework for organization to fulfil its ethical duty and corporate social responsibilities. When ethical issues are managed and real CSR initiatives are provided, it opens up new opportunities of the beneficial cooperation with the stakeholders and minimizes risks for the companies' sustainability.
