INTEGRATED PROJECT DELIVERY AT AUTODESK INC., (A)

Introduction

Company Background and IPD The autobiography of the company Autodesk Inc Autodesk Inc, founded in 1982, is a software design company specializing in software development and distribution for the computer aided design. AutoCAD, a flagship product of world's leading design technological firm, Autodesk Inc. molds today's AEC industry, during and after its development.

Challenges Faced

Using IPD, Autodesk faced several issues with traditional forms of Managing Construction Project Deliveries. Most of the time, different stakeholders in a project did not work in harmony which led to misunderstanding, increased expenses and extended time frame.

Project Delivery

That move enabled Autodesk to outline an integrated project delivery environment, as IPD allows. Thus, the major advantages, such as collaboration and transparency, were brought to the foreground to provide more effective delivery of projects.

Conclusion

Project delivery is normally done through collaboration, and this can be as seen from the Autodesk case. It is noteworthy to find that by using IPD, traditional project delivery difficulties were reduced via its functionality. From these perspectives, the alignment of the goals of all the major stakeholders mean that potential risks are minimized, project timings are optimized, and the quality of deliverables is improved.
