

“New Challenges of the Aldine Independent School District”

Introduction

The situation in Aldine Independent School District (AISD) has also been through a number of changes over the recent past and this is in harmony with the general situation prevailing in school and society today. This paper examines these issues and poses information on possible approaches to take.

Demographic Shifts

Another problem AISD faces is the increasing enrollment of students of color in AISD schools and classrooms.” As the enrollment of students using English as their Second Language increases and other students of color, the district has no option than to find the best ways to teach such students. This shift needs more focus on the provision of bilingual learning and culturally sensible pedagogy.

Funding Constraints

Thus, AISD's challenge is funding which stands out as the biggest hindrance to the advancement of AISD. However, analyzing the educational services needs of the district it can be concluded that the budget has not adjusted to these needs. Reduced funding affects the staffing, integration of technology, and hosting of other activities and hence, students' performance.

Conclusion

Exploring how the Aldine Independent School District is poised to appropriately address the new challenges presented entails the analysis of admixture, diligently curtail spending, invite technology and integrate the community. There are certain ideas that AISD should consider in order to start working toward the goal of delivering better education for all students.
